Biography:

Angélique des Francs (b. 1999, Paris) is a French-American painter and jewelry designer based in New York. Drawing from her background in jewelry and fashion, Angélique's art suggests a dialogue between the emotional and the material world. Her pieces connect the intangible, memory, feeling, with the physical; exploring the layers we gather around us over time. Through imagined figures and ambiguous landscapes, Angélique captures the tension between strength and fragility within womanhood, inviting viewers to connect with the unspoken aspects of their own inner lives. Her creative process is intuitive, allowing raw, unfiltered emotion to guide each piece, resulting in compositions that feel both familiar and otherworldly, where beauty and discomfort coexist. Now based in New York, she continues to develop this vision, encouraging viewers to engage in a contemplative exploration of form, memory, and the quiet complexities of human experience.
